The shift from grants to loans under President Reagan means both present and future college students will graduate with often large debts.

TNC WELCOMES ART HALL

BY DANA PUMPHREY

Art Hall is new in town. Have you heard of him? Just recently moved to Nashville, he has been esteemed by some to potentially be one of the top-notch employers this city has to offer. Why? Art Hall couples a concern for people with the proficiency of a well maintained office.

I had the privilege of speaking with this newly appointed supervisor in our Trevecca community. It was a privilege because it was refreshing to hear the positive comments this gentleman had to make. I like the sound of . . . "the best maintained college in America. We don't have to be second to anybody . . ." and so the interview began. The key word is maintained. Art Hall has been sent to Trevecca by ServiceMaster Management Services to replace Bill Keiger, former supervisor of Plant Operations and Maintenance.

the Reagan Legacy

A Shift From Grants To Loans Changes Student Life

(CPS) -- Eight years after they rode into Washington, D.C., pledging to change federal student aid forever, members of the Reagan administration can say they succeeded. In their wake, they're leaving students who generally have to borrow aid money they used to get as grants.

Virtually all observers -- whether conservative or liberal -- say the dramatic shift in financial aid programs from grants to loans probably is the administration's most enduring campus accomplishment.

"Debt," said Fred Azcarate, president of the U.S. Student Association (USSA) in Washington, D.C., "is the great legacy of the Reagan administration for students."

Still others are disappointed the trend away from grants wasn't faster.

"The intent of financial aid was to supplement the cost (of a college education)," contended Jeanne Allen of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank that helped develop many of the administration's campus policies.

President Reagan came into office with other education goals, too, like abolishing the Department of Education, shifting the responsibility for funding campuses from Washington to the states and, of course, drastically cutting the federal budgets for schools and colleges.

But "the announced intention to decrease expenditures. . . never materialized," noted Terrel Bell, Reagan's first education secretary.

It wasn't for lack of trying. In his first to budget proposals and again in 1987, the president tried to cut some major programs by as much as half.

"They wanted to do away with student aid," asserted Rick Jerue, staff director of the House Postsecondary Education Subcommittee. "Things would have been far worse if Congress had not opposed the Reagan administration on cuts."

Most direct aid to campuses for libraries and housing were in fact abolished, as were aid programs like student Social Security and the Middle Income Student Assistance Act.

The shift from grants--which students don't have to repay--to loans was probably the most significant and longlasting byproduct.

"The shift from grants to loans was not a fluke," said Gwendolyn L. Lewis of the Dollege Board. "It will probably continue. We're not likely to see a shift (back to grants) in the future."

In the mid-1970's, Lewis said, 80 percent of the federal aid given to students was in the form of grants. By 1987-88, it was down to 47 percent.

C. Ronald Kimberling, who served in the Education Dept. under Reagan, blamed Jimmy Carter. "The most astronomical growth in loans came in the Carter administration," he said, adding the government loaned $7.8 billion to students in 1981, up from $1.9 billion in 1978.

However, the amount of money granted to students also rose during the same period. Much of the increased loan money was given to middle-class students, who had been made eligible for student loans for the first time.

Student life, regardless of who started the shift to loans, has been changed as a result.

Liberal arts students, for example, changed their majors from lower-paying careers like teaching to more lucrative fields because they knew they'd need to repay loans, some said.

"Students know they are going to graduate with large debt, and that affects what classes they pick, what majors they choose, what jobs they select when they graduate," claimed Arlette Slachmuylder, president of the State Student Association of New York.

"It creates a lot of pressure on the student that hasn't existed in the past," he added.

USSA's Azcarate charged, "Some students will be in debt for the rest of their lives. Many young people are not going to college because they can't assume the debts."

And many who do choose to assume those debts now can't pay them back, critics said.

Just covering defaulted loans costs Washington $1.6 billion a year, up from $530 million in 1983 and about half the total it spends on Stafford Loans (formerly called Guaranteed Student Loans).

Former Secretary Bell said "the response of the higher education community and Congress frustrated" the administration's hopes to cut college spending more, and some Reagan critics remain bitter about it.

"We've been forced (to fight) to hold the status quo," Azcarate said. "I'd rather work on issues such as the retention and recruitment of minorities instead of defending programs that have existed for years." T

ART HALL CONTINUED...

My premeditated thirty minute interview stretched into a good amiable hour as I sat opposite Art Hall in his office, he at a mammoth desk, I in a convenient chair. The man with the big desk has big ideas. The guidelines by which he runs his life and his office are synonomous. The framed guidelines are displayed behind him on the wall serving as a reminder to Art Hall and words of wisdom to visitors (such as myself). As he was about to share these objectives I waited for him to pause and use the conveniently located cheat sheet, but none such was needed. He proceeded to tell me the objectives of ServiceMaster for the corporal down to the lowest worker. He stressed the first three explaining the fourth will come along as a result of the former ones.

To Honor God
To Help People Develop
To Pursue Excellence
To Grow Profitably

New Plant Operations and Maintenance Supervisor, Art Hall, arrived January 4th and immediately started to work with the ideas that brought him here. Art Hall has been summoned to Trevecca for efficiency purposes. In past weeks several students have shared their mild frustrations with unrepaired desk lamps and light fixtures that seemingly go unattended to for weeks on end. That's going to change. Just this week Maintenance fixed both my desk lamp and stopped up bathtub. Understanding that there has been a lack of promptness in responding to student requests, it is now true that steps are being taken to rectify the situation which demands of us, the students, to be patient and realize efficiency will come but not overnight. Art Hall stated, "This college is deserving of good maintenance and that is what I am here to do. I compliment Dr. Adams and Dr. White--they were sensitive enough to the needs of the college to bring about change to reestablish the rapport between the students and maintenance."

Art Hall came to us from his year assignment as Coordinating Manager of Health Care Services at Hillside Hospital in Pulaski, TN. He is more closely associated with Georgia, his homestate, and with Crisp County Hospital where he was manager of Health Care Services for six years. Employed as a clinical engineer by ServiceMaster, he expects Trevecca to be a permanent assignment until the rapture occurs. When questioning Art Hall about his background he began with happy emotion, "I am first of all a Christian . . ." Art Hall is of nondenominational affiliation. He is married with four children and five grandchildren. Art Hall has a graduate degree from the Institute of Technology, but his main education is documented under the Air Force.

It is easy to see that people mean something to Art Hall. He currently has a working crew of 25 employees and it is growing. Three of those employees are Trevecca students, Mark Wilson, Lemlem Asmelash, and Marie Nabors. Art Hall stressed "I encourage participation in the maintenance program. You gain experience, develop skills, and are well rounded as for as maintenance functions and custodial duties go. I encourage the development of people. There are positions as electricians, heating specialists, groundskeepers, custodians, and auto mechanics."

Our interview ended on Art Hall's concluding remark, "We've got the department of people with skills to deliver an excellent job. We have a college that wants an excellent job. It is my job now to try to marry those two together." On behalf of the Trevecca student body let me say thank you for expressing a genuine interest in us and we are happy that you are now a part of our Trevecca environment. ☪

STUDENT SUES FOR AIDS DISCRIMINATION

(CPS) -- A student kept out of dental school because he tested positive for the AIDS virus has sued Washington University of St. Louis for $3 million in damages.

David Bensinger, dean of Washington's dental school, dismissed the student -- referred to in the suit as John Doe -- in August after finding out the student had tested positive for AIDS antibodies in March or April, 1988, but had gone on to treat 27 patients at the campus clinic as part of his studies anyway.

AIDS (aquired immune deficiency syndrome), of course, is a fatal virus spread through the exchange of bodily fluids like blood and saliva, which occur often in dentistry.

Bur Norman London, the dismissed student's attorney, argued in the lawsuit filed in December that his client legally is handicapped, and that the dental school's action amounted to discriminating against a disabled person.

While campus officials refused to comment on the than 100 signatures on a petition to protest a proposal to install a condom machine in a campus dormitory.

The students said the machine will promote sexual promiscuity and increase students' risk of getting AIDS.

"Condoms won't solve these problems," said Sheila Barker, one of the students leading the petition drive. "These problems are on the rise because some people don't have any morals."

Placing condoms in campus bathrooms could damage Grand Valley State University's reputation, contended Senator Brian Sayers at a recent Senate debate about the machines at the Michigan campus.

"I don't want condom machines in my bathroom," said another Grand Valley student. "What will my parents and grandparents think when they come to visit?"

The student senate at Appalachian State University, however, voted to install condom machines in residence halls this term, mak-suit, school lawyer Peter Ruger contended they were well within their rights to dismiss the student in the name of protecting others from the virus.

Protection efforts, meanwhile, provoked arguments about morals at other schools:

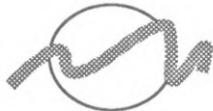

Arizona State University dissidents collected more ing ASU the first university in North Carolina to do so.

"There was a lot of concern of the moral issue of the bill, but with the amount of unwanted pregnancy, this bill's effects will serve as a prevention method," said Jenny Novak, the bill's sponsor. "The student government in no way condones promiscuity. We're just concerned about students." ☪

NEW BILL REQUIRES MILITARY OR VOLUNTEER WORK FOR FINANCIAL AID RECIPIENTS

(CPS) -- Students would have to join the military or do volunteer work to get financial aid if a new bill introduced Jan. 6 becomes law.

As expected, Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) and Rep. Dave McCurdy (D-Okla.) said they'd introduce legislation that would phase out all federal student aid programs within five years, replacing them with a deal in which students would have to perform some kind of "national service" in return for aid.

McCurdy, in announcing the measure, said it would enforce the notion that "democracy is not free."

If the plan passes -- both legislators expected Congress to vote on it by early 1990 -- students would have to serve one year in a public service civilian job like working in a nursing home or hospital or two years in a combat branch of the military.

Students who served in the military would get a $25,000 grant at the end of their hitch.

Students who worked in civilian jobs would get a $10,000 grant.

McCurdy hoped the plan would "reinvigorate citizenship" as an ideal that was first severely damaged during the Vietnam war. Then "the 1970s and early 1980s featured 'me generations' more interested in their own financial gain and getting BMWs than serving their country." ☪

Computers for Christmas

BY TIFFANY COX

As students left behind the cheer of the Christmas Holidays and returned to the safe hillside of Trevecca, joyous reunions echoed throughout the campus. While many students unpacked new treasures, others found a shocking surprise. The day was January 5th. Steve and Robin Fountain sat down at the computer in the Trev-echoes office to begin a new semester of work. They both noticed a difference in the computer, but were not sure what it was until they tried to load a disc. The external disc drive was gone. It had been stolen. One might think this an isolated incident, but it was not. Another day that will be remembered is Sunday, December the 18th. Tom Stovall was staying on campus a little later than most students so he could put in a few extra hours at work. Sunday night, he took a friend to the airport and then took in a little Christmas shopping. When he returned to Benson Hall, his Macintosh Plus was gone. Gary Wood was notified, and he in turn called the Police. Unfortunately, it was too late.

The Trev-Echoes computer is insured, but the expense of the external disc drive was "less than our deductible." Therefore, it could not be handled through the insurance company. Fortunately, our student government has taken it upon themselves to buy Trev-Echoes a new external disc drive. Although this was not the case for Tom. His $1,500 computer was not insured.

A word to the wise; If you treasure any of your personal belongings, be aware that they may not be safe. The list of other missing items continues to grow.

PA PROGRAM REVEALED

by Kim Willis

"We consider ourselves a pretty unusual group of people," Scot Hill, Physician Assistant student, said.

Physician Assistants (PAs) are those "who are the member of a health care team and works independantly under the supervision of a licensed physician," according to the pamphlet "Physician Assistants: PARTners in Health Care".

There are a total of 20 students that range from ages twenty to fourty-eight. Half of the married students have kids. Only one student lives in the dormitory, the rest live off-campus or in the married student apartments," Hill said.

According to the students the average weekday begins at 4:00 a.m., for early morning preparation of classes - which start at 7:30 a.m. and dismiss at 3:00 p.m.

All Physician Assistant (PA) classes are held in the same room (BS 311) throughout the day Monday through Friday.

When classes are dismissed the students make their rounds of assigned patients at the Trevecca Health Care Center. After which, they go to work or head home to study. The average PA student doesn't get to bed until midnight or later.

"Each semester we take the equivalent of 24 class hours," said Elizabeth Beebe, student representative to the Tennessee Academy of Physician Assistants (TAPA) from Trevecca's PA program.

"A lot of students don't know that Trevecca has a PA program or what a PA is," Gail Mercer, President of Trevecca's PA Association, said.

"I was a Biology/Pre-Med major and didn't know what I qanted to do. I didn't want to be a nurse or a doctor. Then I met someone in the PA program," Mercer said.

"Not just anybody can enter the PA program," Mercer added.

As stated in a handout of the Physician Assistant Program at TNC, the entrance requirements include "two years of college work and all science course prerequisites and general education requirements (are) completed."

Before admisssion "the program places strong emphasis on applicants having had health care experience with direct patient contact, "the handout stated.

According to the PA students, several already had their Associate Degree before acceptance into the program. And a majority of the class already had a background in the medical profession.

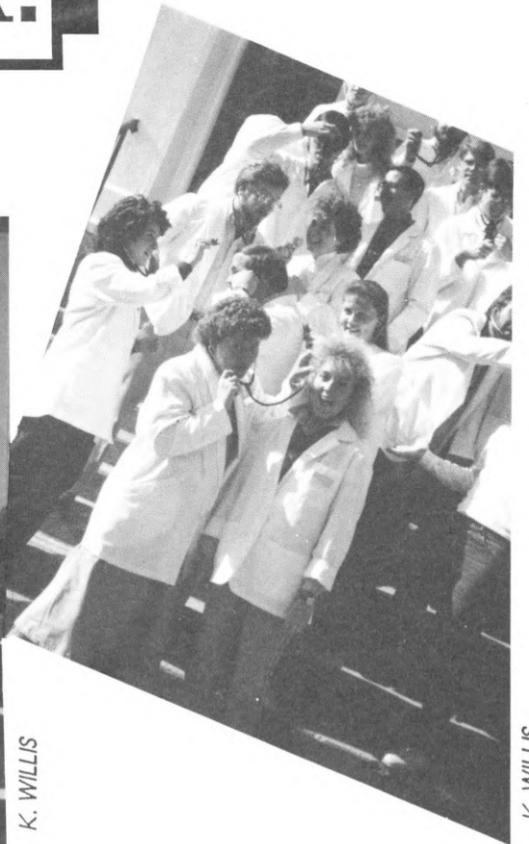

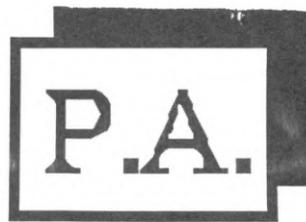

"Trevecca has the only PA program in the state and the only Christian one in the country," Hill said.

"It's a very high pressure, high stress program," Elizabeth Beebe, student representative, said.

"We can't fail more than two classes. After that we're out of the program," Beebe added.

The Physician Assistant students included that the whole program is two years long, which runs thru both summers.

CLINICALLY SPEAKING...

by Kim Willis

"The nurse is wonderful! She 'mothers' you and makes you feel so much better when you're feeling sick," said Micki McCloud, TNC student waiting to be cared for in the clinic.

Trevecca is proud of its clinic which serves its students and their families, faculty and staff.

The clinic is situated behind Georgia Hall on the basement level.

With limited hours in the summertime, the clinic is open yearround, from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to service Trevecca.

A staff of three well qualified people keep the clinic working in great condition. They are Jo Ann Hendershot, Wilma Gallup and Dr. G. Michael Moredock.

Jo Ann Hendershot serves as the receptionist. She is also a dorm mother in Johnson Hall and has previous nursing experience.

The nurse, Wilma Gallup, has worked 14 years in the clinic, nine of which she worked on call. She is responsible for doing a triage or designation of treatment to patients.

If a patient is extremely ill or has an illness which requires a doctor's attention the patient is referred to Dr. G. Michael Moredock, the clinic doctor.

Dr. Moredock is also head of the Allied Health Department at Trevecca.

According to Nurse Gallup, the professional atmosphere of the clinic includes a very high confidentiality policy between the patient and the clinic.

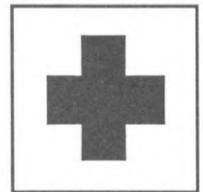

Concerning the low cost of medical care, the clinic uses generic drugs which contain the same ingredients as the expensive ones. Also, the clinic is non-profitable and the workers are hired by Trevecca as a service.

Lastly, if the queazy feeling hits, take a visit to the clinic for a little TLC and if you're too ill and can't make it, don't dial 911, just ask for extension 1251 and help is on the way. ¶

PUBLIC NOTICE

By Stan Sheridan

The Church of the Nazarene is vitally interested in young people. The creation and continued growth of the NYI (Nazarene Youth International) organization and the system of Nazarene colleges are both key ingredients in that concern. The purposes of both blend together, as our colleges and universities serve to educate and train young people for Christian service in their chosen field, and NYI seeks to evangelize, disciple, and train for leadership.

Each works hand-in-hand with the local and district churches of the Nazarene to accomplish these purposes.

Early last semester a group of young Trevecca students were approached by an NYI representative concerning the basic attitude of TNC. Through this, a vision given by God has become very real. Many hours of work and especially prayer have helped build a foundation for a Student Union charted by NYI.

The Nazarene Student Union (NSU) is an organization designed to facilitate the work of the NYI on the college campus, by training leaders for ministry. It is an extension of the ministry of NYI on the local and district level, and is coordinated through the Regional NYI Representative on the

We are a group of young "ON-FIRE" Christians who, through God's will, feel this organization is vital in order to unify the campus in Christ. We are determined to achieve the end, but we know that Christ must be in the center in order to be successful. In summary, we are a campus oriented organization striving to not only do, but be God's will.

We are OMEGA ZETA PHI, which is Trevecca's chapter of the Nazarene Student Union. Our motto is Mark 10:43-44, which states, "Whoever wants to be great among you must become your servant, and whoever wants to be first must become slave of all." The letters stand for "Obedience, Zeal, and Faith."

We know through our own experiences that it is easy to get "lazy" in our faith when coming to a Christian college thinking that everything will run smoothly just because we're in a Christian environment. ## Past tense

We are featuring a new column in Trev-Echoes. Past Tense is a new look at the past. In it we will take a look back in time, through excerpts from vintage issues found smouldering in the acrid rose colored dust of the Trevecca Archives.

TREV-ECHOES
 NOVEMBER 19, 1971

After pastoring a small church for two years during his junior and Senior years of high school, Danny Boone left McComb, Mississippi to come to Trevecca. Such activities as Sophomore Class President, minister for "The New Birth", Circle K member, Vice-President of the Ministerial Association, and Honor Society member, keep his schedule crowded.

While in high school Danny was a member of the Honor Society,

Chaplain of Hi' Y which is a Christian Youth organization, and as had already been stated, pastor of New Salem Church of the Nazarene. A Religion major, Danny plans to attend the Nazarene Theological Seminary upon graduation and from there he intends to go into the ministry. When asked his opinion on Trevecca he said, "I have no negatives - I love Trevecca." ☛

Dear Editor

Last year on this campus there was a game going on that was sponsored solely by the participants of the game. The name of the game was "Assassination." Participants would "assassinate" other participants using water guns or rubber dart guns. The victim was then eliminated from the game . . . pretty harmless, huh?

There was and is another "game" going around campus today, sponsored solely by the participants of the game. This game is bit more deadly, for the participants do not use water or darts--but words, and names (sometimes called labels). The name of this "game" is called "character assassination", and in this game the person who is being "assassinated" doesn't even have to be present (in fact, in most cases, the victim isn't present). The only thing that has to happen is for the person to be referred to in such a way as to tear down his/her character or reputation.

I vividly remember one such example. I was outside Benson dorm when I heard members of a particular service club making fun of a friend of mine. I said, "I think (name withheld) is a pretty nice guy--don't you? Without hesitation, the answer came back, "I think (name again withheld) is a wienee." This person did not know my friend very well, for I talked to my friend about it, but he went on what he thought he knew, and since he was with his friends, he found it safe and convenient (perhaps even funny) to slander the name of my friend.

In the assassination game I was in last year, friendships were made, for you had to know the person whom you were trying to shoot, and once the game was over, it was easy to talk and to laugh about it with others who were in the game. In "character assassination," however, friendships are not made but destroyed, aborted; for this "game" does not pull people together, but it pushes them further apart. It doesn't make them part of a community, but rather it isolates them.

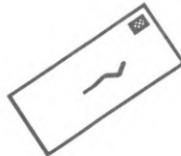

I would like to say that the only participants of this game are students, but the truth is that I have heard faculty members and (GASP!) administration playing the game. I have to come to believe that the primary objective of this game is: Make self look or feel better at the expense of another. In this game there are no winners--only losers. I don't think Christ would approve of such a game, because I don't think Christ approves of such behavior. To my shame I admit that I have been actively involved in slamming the name of another, simply because I found it easy and convenient to do so, and I knew the people with whom I was talking would more than likely agree. I hope it won't sound too self-righteous to say that I have repented of this/these evil(s), and since there can be no repentance unless there is also change, I am continually striving to, as the Psalmist said, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight--Oh Lord, my Strength and my Redeemer."

Dear Editor

My skin is white and I can never know the anger, sorrow, joy or pride that belongs to a group of people who have reached beyond mental and physical abuse to claim what is the right of all living people today. That is the freedom to drink out of the same water fountain, to get a good education, or even to ride the bus on any seat one pleases, the simple freedom to run for public office and to be elected.

What made my heart sink was the fact that less than 20 years ago, black people did not have even these simple freedoms. What renewed my thinking on this subject was the newscast showing the K. K. K. and a new racial group of young misinformed people called skin heads marching against Martin Luther King as if he and the people he fought to help were space aliens and not flesh and blood human people. I have often band that looks straight from 1972, a lead singer who looks like a hip Amy Grant (with some heavy Carole King influences), and a great song with lyrics like "Philosophy is a walk on slippery rocks, religion is a light in the fog," -- an album with all this going for it has got to be great, right? Wrong.

I'm not sure if it's because the Bohemians try just a little too hard, or because they don't try at all, but there is something frustrating about this album. Sure, from the sound of the first two songs on side one ("What I Am" and "Little Miss S") this appears to be a great album. However, from there on out it's a mediocre journey from one mistake to another. In any given song, all of which have the potential of being really good, there's just something that went wrong. Whether it's Brickell's voice -- which drops into an almost conversational tone at the end of every line, ridiculous lyrics ("Your hair is brown -- I'm picturing it falling down . . .") -- not that all the lyrics are ridiculous, it's just that a great many times a potentially good song is ruined by poorly thought-out lines, or the apparent absence of a producer on most of the tracks, Shooting Rubber Bands at the Stars can be summed up as the album that almost was.

There are of course, highlights. "Love Like We Do" is a memorable, happy look at a relationship; "Circle" is a very melancholy piece which opens with some beautiful guitar work -- the guitar solo in the body of the song, however, is inaudible; and of course, those first two songs on side one. These highlights, however, are matched by faults. "Keep Coming Back" is a speed-thrash sounding rag that totally breaks the sound of the album; "The Wheel" is a lame attempt at some sort of metaphysical consciousness; I'll stop here for the sake of brevity.

Once upon a time an album could contain a couple of hit songs and a bunch of nothing fillers and be considered a good album. It seems to me that this time is past. An album today must have value as a whole work of art. There is definite potential here, but there is also a pervading cynicism present. It's almost as if the band would rather be doing something else, and for the most part, it is this characteristic which keeps Shooting Rubber Bands at the Stars in the realm of the great Almost. ☹ marveled at the vast amount of hate that can be found right under my own nose, if I look hard enough. I firmly believe that only about a hand full of people could find something as stupid as skin color a thing to hate. How could so much hate grow without cause or reason is beyond anything I could ever conceive.

I would like to offer a small message of peace to those people who would follow the Nazi, KKK and all groups of hate in this country. I would remind them that many Blacks as well as Whites gave their lives to give you the rights you brag so much under the guise of the first amendment. If I were you I would get on my knees and thank God for the millions of Americans (Black and White, Red and so on . . .) who gave their all unselfishly for your feeble rights.

A blind man never stops to question the color of the person who goes out of their way to come to his aid, he is just grateful for the helping hand. Surely, even a mad man has to realize that it really does not matter what color a person's skin is, we are all still Americans, and we are still the greatest Nation on Earth! We are known this way because we are the melting pot of the world. We merge with millions who are not just W. A. S. P. S., but we are known as a Nation who care for the rights of all people, no matter the color, and we pull together at a moments notice because we are one Nation under God, with liberty and Justice for all!

It is beyond me how anyone could condemn a man like Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He only wanted what all people deserve, rights for all, not just a few. In his most powerful speech, "I have a Dream!", Dr. King talks about his dream about all people living together in harmony and sharing the same rights given to all people. Too bad Dr. King would not live long enough to see his dream take physical form.

Like the early Christians of long ago, the black people of the sixties will choose to die for what they believe is right for the future of their children.

Jesus was a man of love and not hate, and he found that people are the same no matter what color their skin may be, because everyone is a child of his Father. Jesus would later command us to "Love others as we would ourselves!" The son of God would later lose his life because of his message of love, and several centuries later a Black Minister would declare the same message that would also cost him the same thing.

Hate, not love killed Jesus, and it is sad to see that the same kind of hate that put him on that tree put a bullet into a man named Martin Luther King. I believe that King's dream will only be fully seen in the kingdom of heaven, but for now we must settle for semi-peace until gorups like the above mentioned are nothing but bad memories and Jesus is in power! Happy Birthday Martin L. King and Thank you!

Freedom of speech and freedom of the press - great rights guaranteed by the first admendment to the Constitution. It's too bad that our own newspaper doesn't fully have these rights. Did anyone read the last issue of Trev-Echoes? Did anybody read "On The Lighter Side? There were many small words bleeped out of this article. I'm not going to bother with telling what they were because they will probably get bleeped here as well. My point is this: Why bother having a student newspaper if that Paper cannot report the news? Why bother with having a student newspaper if the administration can say what we can or can't print? In every issue of Trev-Echoes this statement is printed: "the views expressed in Trev-Echoes are those of individual contributors and do not necessarily represent the views of Trev-Echoes or Trevecca Nazarene College." Is this true? If this statement isn't true (and I suspect it isn't since our editor wanted a free press for Christmas and probably didn't get it!), I personally would urge the editor to stop printing this statement. To continue printing it when it isn't true is lying and we certainly don't want that happening? How 'bout it Trev-Echoes editor?

I applaud Dana Pumphrey and her article "a college issue," which addressed the issue of cheating and plagiarism without stepping on administration's toes. I am one of those students who would "Kill" themselves for an "A" in a tough three hour course instead of wimping out in a course that requires no more thought than re-those who would try to pass someone else's work off as their own. These students cheat others and cheat themselves because when they get out in the real world they won't know how to think for themselves or do their own work. This is a pity, considering that of all places these things should have been learned, they

If I could add anything to Miss Pumphrey's article, it would be that the real students would do well to remember that they are going to always be in competition with cheaters. It's not fair, but that's the way it is. I would also warn real students that it even happens on Christian college campuses, and it has happened here. ## FURTHER OFF THE RECORD

BRIAN ARNER

Let me clarify this first. I don't normally review music of this type, because I, quite honestly, don't care for it. I've always thought that the gospel soloists of this genre sound very much like music-making machines, totally void of emotion. That's just my opinion, I don't want a flood of letters to the editor. While I do enjoy listening to a great voice and I like to appreciate a vocalist's ability, I don't like the bellow - it - out - and - quit style of the 1-800 # gospel singers of the world. I realize this is a vast generalization, but most of those guys don't sound very human. My biggest problem with singers of that sort occurs when a song written to be sung softly, with emotion, and some degree of breathy - ness is sung wide open in a vulgarly operatic style.

Brian Arner is the first vocalist of this type who actually knows when to let a song speak. The music flows through his voice, it is not hidden by it. There is a sincerity and a humility present on this album that is matched only by Arner's phenomenal vocal abilities. When Brian sings "How Great Thou Art" one thinks of God, not of the man attached to the voice. Arner sings with the power and majesty of God tempered with the tenderness of the man from Nazareth.

Well, I didn't like this type of music at one time, but this is different. It is my hope that Brian Arner keeps the ability to reach into the souls of his listeners - perhaps the mega - popular hair spray types of the world could take a lesson.

This is Brian's first album, and I doubt it will be his last. For more information write:

I came across this album accidentally over the holidays - and my wife liked it, so we listened to it in the car as we traveled. I cringed at first, but as I really listened, I found my prejudice at fault.

I will go a step further to say that if the urge to slander hits us, instead of gratifying that urge, make an attempt to get to know the person better. For at the same moment that we "slam" or "assassinate" someone's character, we do the same to Jesus. Can a "Christian Community" be so calloused? I don't think so. Have we been? YES!

The theme of this school year has been "We can make a difference." Indeed, we all do make differences. I wonder what Trevecca would be like if all the negative comments that have been made were turned around and made to be positive. I would like to think that it would be much better! Since we obviously cannot do anything about the past except evaluate it and learn from it, let's strive to ban the game "character assassination" from our lives and our school and maybe even our world, and let's let the difference we make be a positive one. It's really NOT much to ask. It's well covered in the Two Greatest Commandments (Love the Lord your God with your WHOLE BEING, and love your neighbor as yourself). See? It's actually pretty basic. And if we all determine to allow the Lord to work in our hearts, we will come one step closer to being rather than just seeming to be a Christian College Community.

The New Year is begun with resolutions and the Trohan basketball team is resolving to have a good year by adding three more players to their line-up.

Two of the new Trojans, Anthony Edwards and David Shelton, are transfers from Tennessee State. Thirdly is Michael Peachers, a transfer from Lane College.

Edwards is a freshman majoring in computers. He will be playing the center position. His hometown is Jacksonville, Florida.

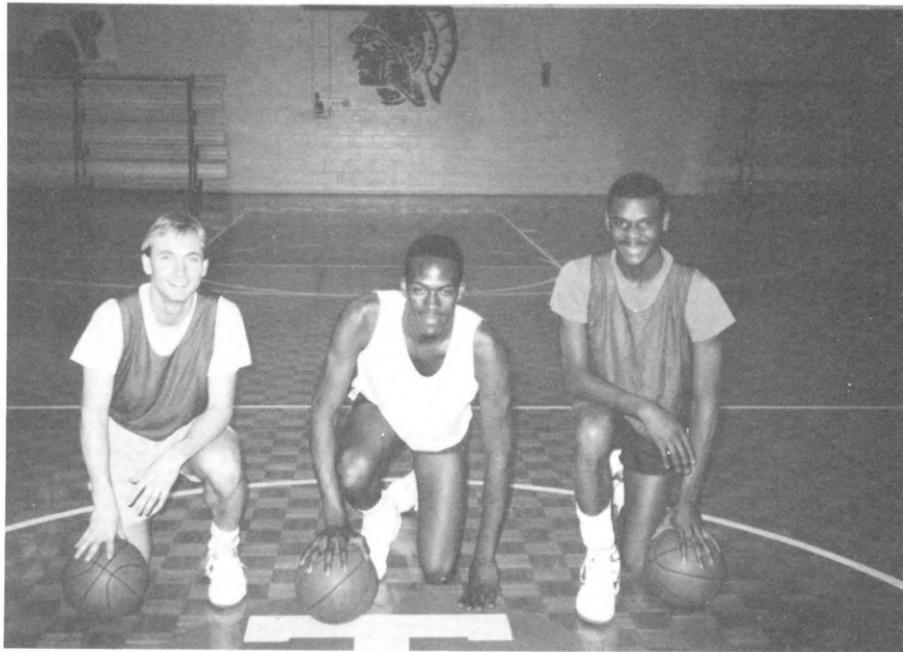

Commenting on his impression of Trevecca he said the programs of study were run a lot better here.

"I enjoyed the games at Point Loma. It was a test to see how we would fit in with the team," Edwards said as his response to the first game played with the Trojan team at Point Loma Nazarene College in San Diego, California.

Shelton is a junior majoring in Business Administration with a minor in Marketing.

Shelton claims Dry Ridge, Kentucky as his hometown.

"I like the academic program and the campus facilities are nice. The basketball program is better here too," Shelton said.

Michael Peachers is a sophomore with an undecided major. He will be claiming the forward position on the Trojan lineup.

Peachers' hometown is Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

According to Peachers and his comments on the Point Loma Tournament, "Everybody had an outstanding game that night."

"It's pretty good here," Peachers said of his arrival at Trevecca.

Frank Wilson, coach of the Trojan team, said that all of these players were going to benefit the team.

He added that Shelton is "a very fine shooter."

Wilson also said that Peachers was beneficial as a rebounder for the team and that Edward has great potential for the Trojan's future. ♪

The tournament began on January the 5th and lasted through the 7th. Other colleges that participated in the tournament were Olivet, Biola University, and Point Loma, all Nazarene Colleges. This is the first time these round-robin tournaments were held.

The team set out with the odds against them. There were only six players eligible to play, but this didn't slow them down. In their first game against Biola University they played with caution, for with six players they couldn't afford to take many chances and get themselves into foul trouble. Kevin Green managed to score a few points which helped out the team a lot. Biola -64, TNC-60.

Before second semester Coach Wilson recruited new players, who were considered "Cavalry" upon arrival in San Diego for the next two games. They are Anthony Edwards, David Shelton, and Michael Peachers. This cavalry aided in the victory of the next two games. David Shelton ended his first game with the Trojans as the lead scorer, with 30 points. The scores of the last two games are as follows: Olivet-85, TNC-87; Point Loma-90, TNC- 118. ♪

SERVICE CLUB UPDATE

by Gina Smith

Our service clubs are working hard this semester trying to keep us and themselves very busy. Although at the time of press the groups were unable to know exactly everything that will be going on, here is a list of the clubs and some of their activities -- in alphabetical order (not necessarily order of importance) --

Circle K (Kiwanis International) -- While planning on painting a house for a needy family, they're also having two blood drives and will be hosting the annual Volleyball Marathon at the end of March, the proceeds for a charity here in Nashville.

Civinettes (Beta Gamma Chi) -- They are working on a revision of their constitution. They have regular visits to the blind school and go to the Tennessee Preparatory School (TPS) every Tuesday and Saturday. With aerobics every Monday and Thursday, they're planning a couple of all-school activities (un-announced as of now).

Along with the Action Auction and Friendship Fair, they will also be participants in the volleyball marathon.

Civilians (Beta Gamma Chi) -- This group is in the process of electing a new president so not much is known at this point. However, they do work the concession stands at ballgames and also visit Crieve Hollow Elementary -- a school for the mentally handicapped.

Rotaract -- This organization's service activities include tutoring at the Boy's Club, visitation to the Trevecca Towers, work for the New Hope Community Church, work for Franklin House Publishing, and a canned food drive. For their social activities, they're planning a 24-hour soccer-a-thon, an Adopt-a-sister program (on campus), a Rotary International auction and raffle, and their monthly luncheons with the sponsoring chapter.

Sigma -- Among their many activities are: tutoring at the Boy's Club, free babysitting for the married students, free hat and coat check at the ballgames, and visitations to the Trevecca Health Care Center, Veterans Hospital, Vanderbilt Children's Hospital, and the Rescue Mission. They make monthly payments to World Vision Adopt-a-child and will have the Dating Game, a fundraiser for charity, along with participation in Circle K's volleyball marathon and Phi Beta Lambda's Rock-a-thon.

Theta Chi -- At this time, the group is refocusing on their ideas of service and they want to start working more for the needs of the campus. They will continue to work with the reconciliation prison ministries, the veteran's administration, cornerstone thrust, and the Nashville Rescue Mission. They will also participate in Circle K's volleyball marathon and Phi Beta Lambda's Rock-a-thon.

For right now, that sums it up. Be looking for these and other activities brought to you by our campus clubs.

The Cumberland Science Museum, Nashville, has been awarded accreditation by the American Association of Museums. Accreditation is the highest honor a museum can receive, and certifies that a museum operates according to standards set forth by the museum profession, manages its collection responsibly and provides quality service to the public. Only 666 of nearly 6,000 museums nationwide have received accreditation.

"We hope the people of Nashville share our pride in having earned this prestigious honor" said Jim Catington, President of the Museum's Board of Trustees. "The process was rigorous, demanding and examined virtually every aspect of our Museum's operations; a year of self-study and an on-site evaluation by a team of experienced museum professionals was required. ## WITH GEORGE BRATCHER

It seems that an old pestilence that we thought we had silenced has returned. I am speaking of none other than that lying prima donna of Libya, Col. Muammar Qaddafi. Some may have thought of President Reagan's past bombing attacks on his country as a bit harsh. I would tend to differ since what we have here is another Hitler just buying his time. This is not just an ignorant, insane terrorist, but rather a smart, powerful, insane, dangerous, dictator of a North African nation. Qaddafi reminds me of the type of kid in high school who didn't mind starting a fight, but screamed bloody murder to the principle if he got whipped. Qaddafi has long since being doing this to the United States on the International Level.

Now before I go further, let us just look back a few weeks and see what this pestilence has been up to again:*

It all began when the news media discovered that intelligence sources had discovered what appeared to be a chemical plant in the making, but this plant was for chemical weapons. Now how did Libya come across such technology? They had a little help from a chemical plant in West Germany, Imhausen-Chemie, who through covert operations, managed to ship material to Hong Kong and then to other Asian ports before they reached their destination forty miles south of Libya where the new plant is located. Now why would a company in a country that has been terrorized by Libya in the past and whose country is a close ally of the U. S. do such a stupid and dangerous thing? The word for such a stupid and dangerous thing is "Money!" Imhausen-Chemie was in serious debt and financial trouble before they made this deal with Libya in 1985. At present one could say that they are back in the "Money!" This is also why another German company has helped the Libyan Airforce to acquire the technology to refuel their French fighter bombers in mid-air. A technology developed by the U. S. What makes this technology so dangerous is that now American analysts say, is that Libya now has the third largest chemical weapons factory in the third world, and they claim that its potential output is between 20,000 and 84,000 pounds of mustard gas and nerve agent daily. The Iraqi plant that made chemical weapons for its war with Iran only made 10,000 pounds daily. It takes about 3,500 pounds to cover over a square mile (German companies were also linked to the Iraqi plant). With the combined technologies of such a massive chemical weapons plant and air refueling abilities, Libya could strike Israel and other North African and Arab countries.

Qaddafi claims that the factory is a pharmaceutical plant. What makes his claim so unbelievable is if it was as he says it is, then why the attack on American Naval jets? The jets' carrier was 100 miles off the coast of Libya, the jets were 50 miles off the coast of Libya, and 600 miles from the site of the plant when the attack occurred. Qaddafi earlier accused the U. S. of wanting an attack as an attempt on his life, and if this is so, then why did he provoke the U. S. by attacking our Naval jets? The answer is simple. Qaddafi is a prima donna liar. Qaddafi claims the Libyan MIGs were merely reconnaissance vessels. U. S. camera's on the Naval jets reveal that these MIGs were armed. Also, the factory is not a pharmaceutical plant, or else it would not need anti-aircraft missiles surrounding it as discovered by U. S. intelligence.

Our only answer to this problem is to continue to hang tough with these terrorist. Passivism will get us nowhere except more bombed Pan Am and other civilian flights. The U. S. efforts in fighting terrorism are not totally successful, but they are making progress. U. S. agents are on the hunt of terrorists in the terrorists' own countries and have even captured one and brought him back to stand trial. Countries that support terrorist are beginning to back away from them. After the bombing of Pan Am flight 103, Syria made an immediate statement claiming to have no involvement and Qaddafi made an appeal for the release of the hostages in Lebanon (which I believe to be another prima donna lying act on his part). Nonetheless, only a firm policy that will not tolerate terrorism will work. The U. S. should stand firm in its demand for Libya to dismantle the plant before it starts production. If Libya does not, then the U. S. will not be able to resort to an airstrike because of the anti-aircraft missiles, but the U. S. should use its nonnuclear submarine tomahawk missiles which would do the job and not risk the lives of our men in service.

If Qaddafi does not comply to more peaceful ways and continues in terrorism, then it has been suggested in the past that he be assassinated. Since the fish rots from the head down, would it not be beneficial to get rid of this African cichlid?

On the lighter side was a column introduced last year by Sharon LaFave. Unfortunately, Sharon has recently departed Trevecca to further her education and social life. But, fortunate as I may be, I joined "Trev-Echoes" and was given the noble task of trying to fill her column.

Therefore, I, Pam Smith, do solemnly swear to uphold the ideas that have made "On The Lighter Side" so "popular" with Trevecca.

Keeping in context with "The Lighter Side", I'd like to review a serious and a not so serious issue in play on our campus.

We were recently all confronted with a memo from Dr. Adams addressing the firealarm situatuon in most (3/4) of the dorms. Apparently most of the dorms have had a problem with excessive numbers of firealarms throughout last semester. We were ordered to, "Cease and Desist." I was informed by the sound that I wasn't just awakened, my studies were interrupted and, my life was endangered.. I am personally outraged over this issue! So, I urge you, please cease and desist from this dangerous practice. Remember: YOU HAVE BEEN WARNED!

If you see this or any other person even conspiring to endanger us again and you feel that you can't square up on them, tell me. I really need $500. I wonder if Trevecca would actually give me $500 or just apply it to my bill.

Only days after receiving this memo I checked my mail only to find flyers in rebuttal to the warning. A student who obviously views this situation on the "lighter side" sent their own warnings. In the warning one suspect was

The statements made in this article are simply my own opinion. Opinions may vary according to the reader and their ability to take things "On The Lighter Side." ☹
